OPENING DINNER AND KEYNOTE ADDRESS

Salena Zito has reported on the policy positions of countless Americans and has her finger on the pulse of what policies Americans want to see Congress consider. In this address, she'll dive into why Americans are so concerned about immigration, trade, jobs, and welfare. Salena will discuss the fact that Illegal immigration is a top concern of the Congress, but it almost never takes action on the issue. The new trade agreement between the United States, Mexico, and Canada, as well as the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act, and welfare reform will also be discussed.

BREAKFAST ADDRESS AND EMERGING ISSUE #1:

THE IMPENDING THREAT TO THE FREEDOM OF SPEECH:

In the US, college campuses are often the battlegrounds for debates on social issues. These battles coined new terms such as 'hate speech' and 'offensive speech', and many students and professors alike call for legislation outlawing both forms of language. Democracies in parts of Europe have already enacted legislation outlawing certain types of speech. What effect does this have on a free society? How can we best understand threats to America's most sacred principles of free speech, political liberty, and freedom of the mind?

10:30 - 10:45 a.m.

BREAK

10:45 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.

EMERGING ISSUE #2:

ENERGY AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Most Americans want low cost energy, while maintaining a healthy environment. However, people take energy for granted without any appreciation for the work it takes to produce this resource. Now 'protecting' the environment has become synonymous with the 'climate change' debate, ignoring how these two facets interact with market forces.

LUNCHEON AND KEYNOTE ADDRESS

WHAT CONSERVATISM, PRESIDENT TRUMP, AND THE CONSTITUTION HAVE TO SAY ABOUT IMMIGRATION

Immigration continues to be an important issue for many American and lawmakers; however, there is no clear solution. Despite some proposals from Congress, the nation has no comprehensive proposal to current and future problems, nor does it have any widespread, unified strategy for how to overhaul the immigration system in general. Why is this such a contentious issue? Why hasn't Congress acted? What do our principles tell us we should do, and how does that differ from the President's vision?

David Azerrad

Director, B. Kenneth Simon Center for Principles and Politics The Heritage Foundation

CYBERSECURITY

Almost everything in our society revolves around a digital platform. However, with our major technological advances come vulnerabilities that place the security of our nation at risk. How are we to address internet privacy verses information sharing in our country? What role do tech companies in the private sector play in shaping our cybersecurity and national security policies?

EMERGING ISSUE #4:

GLOBAL THREATS

In the current global geopolitical landscape, many nations or entities threaten the safety of American citizens and US's interests in multifarious ways. Some of the United States' greatest threats have changed or dissolved within the past two years, while others have remained consistent or even intensified. Old rivals and potential peer competitors make national security an ever more complex but necessary concern.

MEDIA BLITZ: MESSAGING ON DIFFICULT ISSUES

The media has changed the way the public learns issues, understands concepts, forms opinions, and spreads ideas, making effective communication vital in today's increasingly social and digital environment. What are the most effective ways to communicate? How does this change based on the issue being discussed?

CAMPFIRE DISCUSSION:

LESSONS FROM GENERAL GRANT AND THE CIVIL WAR

Shortly before his death, President Grant, with the help of his good friend, Mark Twain, authored a personal memoir. In it, he described firsthand his experiences during the Civil War as leader of the Union Army. Tom Spoehr, who served in the US Army for 36 years, uses General Grant's legacy to shed light on the qualities of successful leaders and share anecdotes of exceptional leadership.

BREAKFAST ADDRESS AND LEADERSHIP DISCUSSION:

WORKING WITH THE WHITE HOUSE

The Constitution dictates that the Legislative and Executive Branches have inherently different roles; however, as is evident throughout history, the interests of each branch often overlap or even clash. Working together is sometimes easier said than done, but no matter the objective, it is important to know the most effective ways to go about working with the White House.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE REFORM

2018 | Emerging Leaders Retreat

Over the past four years, the Congress has been wrestling with various forms of criminal justice reform, and action on this issue is becoming more and more likely. Great ideas like prison and sentencing reform, as well as mens rea reform, may well finally be headed to a national debate. This panel will dive deep into the background of these ideas, explain their merit, and the assess the likelihood of their success.

CONGRESS SHALL HAVE THE POWER: LAWMAKERS AND THE CONSTITUTION

The Constitution recently turned 231 years old. Upon reading it, Thomas Jefferson called it "unquestionably the wisest Constitution ever yet presented to men." It remains, to this day, the oldest written national constitution in continuous use in the world. But, can it still be said to be the wisest of all constitutions? And can its wisdom only be gleaned by judges and legal experts, rather than Members of Congress? David Azerrad will discuss how lawmakers should understand their constitutional role in a federated republic, and what their oath to uphold the

BREAKFAST ADDRESS AND LEADERSHIP DISCUSSION:

WORKING WITH THE WHITE HOUSE

The Constitution dictates that the Legislative and Executive Branches have inherently different roles; however, as is evident throughout history, the interests of each branch often overlap or even clash. Working together is sometimes easier said than done, but no matter the objective, it is important to know the most effective ways to go about working with the White House.

Paul Winfree

Director, Roe Institute for Economic Policy Studies

The Heritage Foundation

BREAK

10:15 - 11:15 a.m.

LEADERSHIP DISCUSSION:

FORMING LEGISLATIVE COALITIONS

In order to understand or advance legislation, coalition building within and amongst the House and Senate is imperative. A useful and advantageous skill often developed over time, building and maintaining relationships with individuals, offices, or groups with similar goals can lead to policy victories.

Justin Ouimette

Executive Director, House Freedom Caucus

Chris Barkley

Policy Director, Senate Republican Policy Committee

Matt Dickerson

Policy Director, Republican Study Committee

EMERGING ISSUE #6:

CRIMINAL JUSTICE REFORM

Over the past four years, the Congress has been wrestling with various forms of criminal justice reform, and action on this issue is becoming more and more likely. Great ideas like prison and sentencing reform, as well as mens rea reform, may well finally be headed to a national debate. This panel will dive deep into the background of these ideas, explain their merit, and the asses the likelihood of their success.

John Malcolm

Vice President, Institute for Constitutional Government
